CSA Shared Risk Agreement

Community-Supported Agriculture involves shared risk and shared rewards for the farmer and the consumer. Farm members each purchase an equal share of the season's harvest, not a certain volume or weight of vegetables. Every year your share will be a little different, because every year growing conditions are a little different.

The risk is crop shortages or losses, which would be reflected in your share box. The reward is that if we have a great season, you'll receive a lot of high-quality vegetables! Even in 2012 (the year of the flood), we only sustained a few significant crop losses. The diversity of crops grown helps ensure we always have plenty of good food, and your commitment and support gives us (your farmers) plenty of motivation to work hard and do our best for you.

We've enjoyed productive growing seasons in the past and plan for the same this year. Our farm is Certified Organic, and our goal is to improve the health of the soil, plants, animals, and people at Stone's Throw Farm.

Kids' Kitchen Fund

Contributions to this fund are optional.

Again this year, we're collecting contributions to help provide a CSA share for the Damiano Center's Kids' Kitchen, which works to make sure Duluth children in poverty have access to quality, healthy food. For more information about this much-needed program, see www.damianocenter.org/programs.

Any amount helps if you're able -- even $5!
